India's government is likely to cut spending for the current fiscal year by as much as Rs 2 trillion as it faces one of the biggest tax shortfalls in recent years, three government sources said. Asia's third largest economy, which is growing at its slowest pace in over six years because of lack of private investment, could be hurt further if the government cuts spending. But with a revenue shortfall of about Rs. 2.5 trillion, the government has little choice to keep its deficit within "acceptable limits", the first official, who did not want to be named, told Reuters.
